

Nancy J. Duff - Biography

is the Stephen Colwell Associate Prof. of Christian Ethics, Emerita at Princeton Theological Seminary. After almost 30 years of teaching Christian ethics and theology at the Seminary, she retired in December 2020. For many years, she taught a course on the ethics of resisting and accepting death. She has served on the ethics committee of the local hospital for over 25 years, and in 2018 she published a book, Making Faithful Decisions at the End of Life (Westminster John Knox). Many of the ideas in her presentation will be drawn from that book. She hopes to work on a companion book, Living Faithfully into Older Age.

She was a student intern at First Presbyterian Church in Charlotte in 1975-76 under the supervision of Carson Hughes. She and her husband, David C. Mertz (who is a retired pastor in the United Methodist Church), live in East Windsor, NJ.
